"Between Assimilation and Annihilation: Jews in Germany and Their Children"

After centuries of persecution, Jews became citizens of equal rights in Germany in 1875. From this date until 1934, a majority of German Jews opted to integrate into mainstream society. Many married non-Jews, but their children did mostly not adhere to the Jewish faith. Taking as an example my own ancestors, I will guide you on a journey along this path.

The meeting will be held on
